

Four Doorways to Deepening Worship

Learn how to unlock the gifts your congregation already has to revitalize worship.

Adam Kukuk is a musician, composer & worship consultant.

From organ and piano to choirs and drum groups, Adam has meaningfully incorporated music ranging from Bach to Tracy Chapman in worship. Always striving to help congregations discover their resources and deepen their experience of God. Whether leading a cappella call-and-response refrains, Renaissance motets, children's bells, homemade percussion orchestras, contemporary praise music, or rousing Evangelical organ hymns, he has one goal: to help people worship God.

Imagine...

...a worship committee meeting. The faces around the room are blank. "We need to do something different with worship, it's just not connecting. Where are the young families with children? Why do the men keep checking their smart phones during the service? Why do people seem so passive on Sunday morning?"

Questions like this are familiar, but the way forward can be elusive.

What if the way forward starts like this: You have already been given all the elements you need to deepen your experience of God. Maybe you need a catalyst to begin the reaction.

Bring your whole worship team for a time of exploring experiential worship, deepening worship practices, and directly applying new ideas and resources into congregational worship.

You will learn:

- Why worship needs to include our whole selves and whole families
- How to teach through experiences, not explanations
- To use the Four Doorways into experiential worship
- About circles and lines: Two types of congregational worship music
- Practical advice on leading change with grace
